“A newly minted classic, a great piece of writing.”
–Sylviane Gold, New York Times

New from TCG Books:
Prayer for My Enemy by Craig Lucas

NEW YORK — Theatre Communications Group (TCG) is pleased to announce the publication of Prayer for My Enemy, Craig Lucas’s latest play about the public and private turmoil in everyday America. Here we find the Noone family: son Billy has just returned from Iraq to find his sister Marianne together with his childhood friend (and one-time lover) Tad; manic-depressive patriarch Austin watches his nature shows and tries to stay sober, as his wife Karen deflects anything unpleasant—all while the Yankees battle the Red Sox for the pennant.

“Prayer for My Enemy dares to ask smart and hard questions about a homegrown violence that reaches from suburban backyards into the battlefields of Iraq.”
–Ben Brantley, New York Times

Craig Lucas is no stranger to dark territory, which he also explored in his recent plays Small Tragedy and The Dying Gaul, which was later made into a film that Lucas wrote and directed. With Prayer for My Enemy, he boldly and perceptively delves into “family cycles of neglect and pain, the tyranny of alcoholism, the rage underscoring modern American life—bringing light and craft to previously unlit corners,” and illuminating the ways he is “one of the American theater’s best writers,” (Variety).

“Viscerally potent…Lucas can masterfully distill a world of hurt and perplexity into complicated relations and single, pithy lines.” –Misha Berson, Seattle Times

In speaking of his process in crafting a domestic drama with a larger political scope, Lucas says: “I didn’t want to write about the Iraq adventure out of my political creed…A play may spark the beginning of compassion or thought, but change is very difficult and painful. The very best we can hope for is to show the mess of life in such a way as to perhaps awaken our shared capacity for embracing life, reawakening to it in all its beauty and terror.”

Craig Lucas is a playwright, screenwriter and director of both theater and film. His plays include Prelude to a Kiss, The Dying Gaul, The Singing Forest, Small Tragedy, Reckless, Blue Window, God’s Heart and the book for the Tony Award-winning musical The Light in the Piazza. He wrote the screenplays for Longtime Companion and The Secret Lives of Dentists.
