Theatre Communications Group Announces
More Than 35 Organizations Now Participating In Shinsai: Theaters for Japan on March 11, 2012

NEW YORK, NY – Theatre Communications Group (TCG), the national organization for theatre, is pleased to announce that participation in Shinsai: Theaters for Japan has grown to over 35 organizations, with 12 states as well as several provinces in Canada now represented. On March 11, 2012, the first anniversary of the earthquakes, this consortium will stage multiple fundraising events for the Japanese theatre community affected by the disaster, with audience donations distributed through the Japan Playwrights Association.

Shinsai [SHEEN-sigh] means great quake in Japanese. Participating theatres will stage fundraising events featuring a menu of 10-minute plays and songs – now available online – donated from major American and Japanese artists, including Edward Albee, Philip Kan Gotanda, Richard Greenberg, John Guare, Oriza Hirata, Naomi Iizuka, Nen Ishihara, Shoji Kokami, Tony Kushner, Jeanine Tesori, Toshiki Okada, Yoji Sakate, Kumiko Shinohara, Toshiro Suzue, Suzan-Lori Parks, Doug Wright, John Kander, Fred Ebb, Stephen Sondheim and John Weidman. Using the model of 365 Days/365 Plays, theatres everywhere are invited to craft their own event, drawing from the donated plays and from work generated by their own resident artists.

“The international solidarity of artists is a vital model for the international solidarity of all humanity,” said Oskar Eustis, Artistic Director of The Public Theater. “The American theater community is proud to offer support and partnership to our Japanese colleagues.”

“The growing participation in Shinsai: Theaters for Japan demonstrates the strength of our global theatre movement when we reach out to each other in times of need,” said Teresa Eyring, Executive Director of TCG. “Shinsai is a part of TCG’s efforts to help theatres in this country and across the globe become more resilient in the face of adversity and disaster.”

The genesis of the event began shortly after the disaster when actor James Yaegashi, whose family is from a nearby area, called friends in the New York theatre to say, “We as a theatre community have to do something to help our fellow artists on the other side of the world.”

Six months later, a consortium of over a dozen organizations came together to catalyze a nationwide effort, including the Association for Theatre in Higher Education, The Atlantic Theater, The Cooper Union, The Dramatists Guild, The Dramatists Guild Fund, Japan Playwrights Association, Japan Society, Lincoln Center Theater, Manhattan Theatre Club, The Play Company, Playwrights Horizons, The Public Theater, The Martin E. Segal Theater Center, New York Theatre Workshop and TCG.

The list of participating organizations now also includes American Blues Theater, Crossing Jamaica Avenue, The Center for Remembering and Sharing, University of Victoria, Georgia College & State University, Gorgeous Entertainment, Hybrid Theatre Works, Independent Actors Theatre, Kurotama Kikaku, La Luna Productions, Leviathan Lab, Mindbending Student Productions, Northern Arizona University, Potomac Theatre Project at Middlebury College, ShoeString Productions, Smith Street Stage, SUNY Adirondack, Team Japan, The Theatre Project, Theatre Conspiracy, UglyRhino Productions, University of Redlands, Wild Goose Creative and York University.
